Allied Pixel Streamlines the Process of “Responsifying” a Website

MEDIA, PA (March 2016) – Allied Pixel was tasked to make client Foster Delivery Science’s website mobile-friendly. The solution was to update the site with a responsive design while maintaining the Drupal CMS it was originally built upon.

The update was straightforward. We implemented a template called Bootstrap 3, which entailed mainly just reskinning the site. There was little need to deal with programming or content edits because the site remained in Drupal — thus a big time/cost saver.

There were several benefits to the client. First, it retained Drupal, a CMS that they were already familiar with for managing content. Second, the site is now fully responsive and hence mobile friendly. And finally, the site is much more secure and less susceptible to hacking, thanks to updated code.
